Glover's request for search group denied by board

Sheila Billerbeck

Daily Eastern News correspondent

SPRINGFIELD—Eastern's Board of Governors representative Matt Glover was unanimously denied position on the BOG's presidential search committee at the April 7 BOG meeting.

Glover requested the BOG let him serve on the BOG's presidential search committee because "a student representative is needed on the committee."

After being refused as a presidential search committee member, Glover asked that he be made an ex-officio member of the campus advisory search committee. However, Glover's second proposal was also denied.

"I thought it would be better to solve more problems if I was on the committee," Glover said.

Glover said that three students would not be able to adequately represent the student voice needed to elect a new president for Eastern.

BOG Executive Director Donald Walters said BOG student representatives will have "their say" about the presidential candidate at the end of the month, when the final three presidential candidates are interviewed by the BOG.

"It is the sole responsibility of the voting board to conduct this search," Walters said.

Walters said Glover was not allowed to be on the BOG's presidential search committee because it was not appropriate for a non-voting member to sit in on a board committee.

Glover said he will "make it clear" to the Student Body that he wants to serve on the campus advisory search committee.

"The board committee told me to pursue a position on the campus committee through student elections," Glover said. "Why they don't want students on board committees is beyond understanding."

Policy to stabilize class size to go into effect in fall—Rives

by Sheila Billerbeck

A policy to stabilize class sizes will go into effect fall 1983 due to a decrease in Eastern's financial support.

The policy requires a minimum number of students to be enrolled in a course or section before the class will be offered.

Stanley Rives, provost and vice president for academic affairs, said Monday the policy was necessary in preparing Eastern with a "long-range solution to possibly more budget cuts."

However, Rives said he does not expect any savings under the new policy for fall 1983, "but I anticipate on a long-run basis we will save several thousand dollars, perhaps the equivalent of four or five positions a year."

Under the policy, 1000 to 2999 class levels must have a minimum of 20 students. Rives noted that 1000 to 2999 class levels averaged 31 students per class this semester.

Also, 3000 to 4749 class levels must have 12 students per class. Currently, classes at the 3000 to 4749 level have 26 students per class, he continued.

Class levels 4750 to 4999 will need to average eight students per class. Also, 5000 class levels and above will average six students per class, he said.

"As you can see, the minimum requirement figures are well below the actual class sizes we've previously had," Rives said.

However, Rives said independent study, internship, thesis and honor classes are not included in the policy. Other classes exempt under the policy include fine art studio classes and laboratory courses.

"We're not so much interested in canceling a class, whereas, we want to build a schedule on the enrollment expectation," Rives said.

ment expectation," Rives said.

"Our intention is not to eliminate courses, but to adjust scheduling so that we utilize our very limited resources to the best of our ability," he added.

Rives said he does not anticipate a large number of problems to occur during add-drops because of the policy.

"During or immediately after the first full day of add-drops and before the first class meeting day, the chairpersons will review class enrollment and discuss any problems with their deans," he said.

If a class falls below the minimum number of students required, it will either be canceled or an exception will be made. Under an exception, the chairman must state recommended reasons for not canceling the class and must receive approval from the dean.

"This policy is not absolute," he said. "To say that any class that has less than the required number of students will be canceled is not true."

If a course is canceled, the class will meet at its first scheduled meeting and the chairman will request that students pick up another section of the class in the add-drop line, Rives said.

He told Faculty Senate members Tuesday that faculty would not be adversely affected by the proposal, although if several of an instructor's assigned classes were canceled he could be left with fewer hours than contracted with the university.

Rives said he did not expect this situation to occur often, but if an instructor had a light course load, his extra time could be devoted to research.

This option would also help alleviate criticism Eastern has received for not conducting many research projects, he added.

Hickman: review city's insurance

by H.E. Meeker

Former Charleston Mayor Bob Hickman said Thursday Charleston should review its present insurance purchasing policies and a survey of other Illinois cities may justify such a review.

Five Illinois cities, comparable in population to Charleston, claim lower insurance premiums through bidding or joining the Illinois Municipal League Risk Management Association for insurance coverage.

Charleston purchases insurance coverage only from local insurance agencies.

Charleston Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer said Wednesday he has asked for bids for Charleston's coverage but has received no offers.

Pfeiffer said he was not sure a bidding system would reduce insurance premiums for Charleston.

Hickman said Charleston should review its insurance coverage because insurance companies have become more competitive on municipal policies.

Three cities, Mt. Vernon, Jacksonville and Edwardsville, have a bidding system or are planning to switch to bidding for insurance coverage.

Mt. Vernon, population 16,861, puts its insurance coverage up for bids. Ray Botch, city manager, said bidding for insurance saves money and "is the best way to go" for the city.

Botch said Mt. Vernon has been bidding for more than 13 years and has saved considerably on premiums over the years.

Jacksonville, population 20,553, opens its coverage to bids on an irregular basis, city clerk Pauline Newport said. She said drawing up specifications for opening up coverage for bidding is very complicated and would be very difficult to complete each year.

However, Newport said bidding is the most feasible way to go and saves money.

Edwardsville, population 11,982, has formed an ad-hoc committee to review city insurance coverage, city clerk Nina Baird said. The committee is studying the feasibility of opening the insurance purchasing process to bids, she said.

Baird said Edwardsville currently bids for liability insurance only. Other coverage including health and fleet or equipment insurance are handled by local agencies.

Effingham, population 10,772, does not allow bids on its insurance but does solicit proposals from various insurance agencies, Effingham Mayor Charles Stevens said. The city purchases part of its insurance coverage through proposals.

Stevens said the specifications required for opening bids are difficult to prepare and some bids can be misleading.

"The possibility exists that some insurance companies will offer a low bid to get their foot in the door and then raise their premiums after the first year," Stevens said.

Dixon, population 18,147, became a member of the Illinois Municipal League Risk Management Association after bidding for insurance for several years, Mayor George Lindquist said.

Lindquist said the city has saved $25,000 annually through Risk Management Association. Before the city was bidding for insurance coverage, he said.

The Risk Management Association had offered an insurance package to the Charleston in July, 1982, and claimed $32,000 in premiums could be saved. Hickman suggested the Council reject the offer because Risk Management was new in the municipality insurance field and could not guarantee "low rates."

Hickman said Charleston had rejected the Risk Management offer in 1982 because "it was too great a gamble."

Hickman added that when association members run up high claims other members will be assessed higher rates.

Mayor Jerry L. Miller of Galesburg, which is a member of the Risk Management Association, said it is true members are assessable for other members' losses, but at present there have been "no substantial increases over the entry rates."

"We have saved significant amounts of money with this group. It provides better and cheaper coverage," he said.

Washington pushes for housing

CHICAGO—Confronting a racially divisive issue that has been “a bugaboo used by past mayors to prey upon fears” of homeowners, Mayor elect Harold Washington said Thursday he hopes to expand housing for the poor in all sections of Chicago.

Washington said cutbacks in federal subsidies meant public housing would not flourish, then added, “but I’ll guarantee you it will be built more readily because we’re not going to drag our feet on the matter.”

Public housing has been a sensitive issue for decades in Chicago. Election night, Alderman Roman Pucinski—a democratic Epton supporter—warned that Washington would face stiff oppositions if he pushed for more.

Soviets: ‘no missiles in Cuba’

MOSCOW—The Soviet Union has “no need” to put nuclear missiles in Cuba in retaliation for U.S. deployment of new medium-range rockets in Europe later this year, a top Soviet general said.

But Kremlin officials have warned repeatedly they will put the United States in an “analogous position” if the American missiles are stationed in Western Europe, within a few minutes’ striking distance of Soviet territory.

Thompson to back tax increase: compromises permanent plan

SPRINGFIELD, (AP)— Gov. Jim Thompson buckled under pressure from Senate Republicans and agreed Thursday to back a four-year state income tax increase instead of the permanent boost he had wanted.

“I’ve never been hesitant to compromise an idea...if I thought the final product will enhance the people of my state,” Thompson said after acknowledging that his change of heart was needed to find a legislative sponsor for his $1.6 billion-a-year tax package.

Several GOP senators said they still considered “excessive” the Republican governor’s proposed 60 percent increase in the individual income tax rate—to 4 from 2.5 percent of income.

Senate GOP leader James Philip and other lawmakers have argued prospects of improved state and national economies could make unnecessary a permanently higher Illinois income tax rate.

Thompson has warned for two months that without higher taxes, he must slash about $800 million from state spending in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

And even with $1.6 billion more next year from higher income taxes, the governor has said Illinois would have only about $300 million left after paying off debts and restoring next year’s budget to this fiscal year’s level.

Earlier Thursday, Thompson’s budget chief, Robert Mandeville, said Thompson has yet to decide how he would spend the $300 million.

And he warned that unless lawmakers quickly to trim another $85 million from state spending for the year ending June 30, the $300 million figure available for next year could shrink.

Philip said he agreed to sponsor Thompson’s income tax increase package—but that there will have to be further changes in the proposal.

“I guarantee you one thing—this isn’t the final plan,” Philip said in his Statehouse office. He said if the measure came up for a vote now, he would hesitate to support it.

Several Republicans in the General Assembly’s upper chamber were left unhappy by the change.

“The four-year phase-out of higher income tax rates is not a phase out at all. It’s a cop-out,” said Sen. Jack Schaffer, R—Crystal Lake.

Senate to send members to ISA

Eastern's Student Senate is sending two representatives to the Illinois Student Association's Board of Directors meeting Saturday, which is being held to elect new officers and discuss plans for Lobby Day.

Senate Speaker Glenn Good said Phillip Montgomery, chairman of the senate's student legislative committee, and Senator Dan Sprehe will attend the ISA Board of Directors meeting scheduled for Saturday in Springfield.

Lobby Day, which will be discussed at the meeting, is April 19.

Student Body President Terry Teele said Wednesday he will conduct a meeting at 2 p.m. Friday in the Union addition Oakland room for anyone interested in attending Lobby Day or learning about the possible $500 tuition hike next year.

Although Eastern is now a member of the ISA, its ISA representatives will not be able to vote at the meeting because ISA dues totaling $300 will not be paid until after July 1, the beginning of the new fiscal year, Good said.

Abe Lincoln: meeting topic

The Coles County Historical Society (CCHS) will sponsor a symposium on Abraham Lincoln this weekend at Eastern.

CCHS General Chairman Ralph McGinnis said the symposium will feature three speakers, including Lloyd Ostendorf, a prominent American painter who does sketch-art of Lincoln.

Ostendorf is currently displaying more than 20 of his paintings and sketches at the Tarble Arts Center, he said.

The symposium will begin at 10:30 a.m. Saturday in the Booth Library Lecture Hall and will feature a lecture "Union Army Desertions and Parades in the Civil War" by Eastern instructor Robert Sterling.

There will be a luncheon at noon in the Rathskeller in the Union which will feature Basil Moore, a Lincoln historian, McGinnis said. Moore will speak on "The Wit and Humor of Abraham Lincoln."

The luncheon will cost $5 and is open to the general public, he added.

A registration fee of $5 per person will provide attendance for all three sessions of the symposium, McGinnis said.

For this fee you get the printed addresses of all three lectures and a print of one of Lloyd Ostendorf's sketches of Abraham Lincoln, he added.

"We decided to have the symposium this weekend because it's the anniversary of Lincoln's death," McGinnis said.

Hickman cooperates in repaying debts

by Fred Zwicky

Former Charleston Mayor Bob Hickman said Thursday he is cooperating with the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. to repay two suits filed against him for debts totaling over $139,000.

The FDIC filed suit against Hickman on Jan. 23 when he failed to pay 16 promissory notes to Coles County National Bank, 701 6th St., which total over $87,000.

In addition, the FDIC filed another suit against Hickman and his former wife Carol on behalf of the Charleston National Bank, 418 6th St., for failing to repay loans of over $39,000.

CNB charged that the Hickmans had been in default on the loans since July 24, 1982 and asked that the Hickmans be forced to pay the total debt as well as costs involved in filing suit.

Fifth Circuit Court Judge James R. Watson ruled in favor of CNB, and ordered a summons be sent to the Hickmans ordering them to pay $39,000 to the bank.

Hickman said, "There is no question

Bob Hickman
Former Charleston Mayor

that I owe the money, its just a matter of working out the details on payment with the FDIC."

Included in the loan agreement between the Hickmans and the CNB was a "confession of judgement" clause, which allowed the CNB lawyers, Brainard, Bower and Kramer and Associates, 600 Jackson St., to find any attorney to appear for the Hickmans and confess judgement, Hickman said.

Local attorney William Paris, 517 7th St., filed for the Hickmans, and said they "cannot and do not deny that they are indebted to the plaintiff."

Hickman said it was within the bank's right to choose his lawyer since he did sign the agreement and was in debt.

Referring to the first suit filed, Hickman said that at the time of filing, CCNB's $87,000 figure was incorrect because he had sold several cars which he previously had leased from his Ford dealership at 1600 Lincoln Ave. He said the sale of the cars reduced the debt to approximately $40,000.

Hickman added that all of the leased cars have now been sold and he is working on selling more properties and holdings to help cover the rest of the debt.

Hickman added, "23 years of work has been wiped out for me."

Bar ordinance should not be altered

Editorial

Mayor Clancy Pfeiffer and the Charleston City Council should not consider repealing a city ordinance that allows 19 and 20-year-olds to enter local bars.

Pfeiffer recently announced he might raise the bar entry age to 21, citing vandalism complaints from three local residents and the police department and consideration of past problems as his main reasons for wanting the age raised.

Although Pfeiffer later discovered he does not have the power to override a city ordinance and would need council approval to do so, he is still considering action "unless he hears convincing reasons not to go 21 or older."

We believe there are many "convincing reasons" why the ordinance allowing 19 and 20-year-olds to enter bars should not be changed.

Perhaps the most important reason is the financial well-being of the Charleston community.

Results of a recent economic impact study conducted by Robert Meier of Eastern's marketing department showed the average amount spent by each student on entertainment per month to be $25, and total monthly expenditures to be $352,525.

Because going to bars is basically the only form of student entertainment in Charleston, it stands to reason that local bar owners will be hard hit and the revenue they generate in this city could be greatly reduced.

Besides loss of revenue, changing the ordinance could cause increased friction between students and local residents.

If students under the age of 21 are not allowed into bars they will simply socialize in other locations. The number of house parties will increase, and instead of being confined to the town square area, students will be socializing all over Charleston.

As it stands now, students spending a weekday night at the bars will usually go home immediately after the establishments close. However, house parties have no closing time and students will probably continue to play loud music and come and go noisily on residential streets well after 1 a.m.

It is understandable that Charleston residents will be greatly annoyed by these house parties and Charleston police will probably be called to put a halt to these activities.

In fact, the police will most likely be busy with disturbance of the peace complaints continually and they cannot possibly better monitor the vandalism situation with a greater area to cover.

Pfeiffer contends that changing the entry age to 21 could save lives. It is obvious the mayor has not taken into consideration the fact that students may travel to surrounding communities, where bar entry is easier, to socialize. This will mean that intoxicated students will be on the highways causing or being involved in accidents.

Pfeiffer should give up the idea of changing the present ordinance because closing tavern doors on a majority of Eastern students could compound existing difficulties and create new problems.

Protest tuition hikes

Editor:

The funding of higher education in Illinois is in very serious trouble!

A recent article in the Chicago Tribune explained that the Illinois Board of Higher Education approved a tuition increase of approximately 60 percent. This action will increase annual tuition by $500 for undergraduates and graduate students will pay about $700 more. If the students of Illinois do not act quickly, they had better prepare for the tuition increase.

It is the duty and responsibility of every student to contact their state representative and senator and personally ask for increased higher education funding. We should support Governor Jim Thompson's tax increase and make sure that specific money is set aside for higher education funding.

On April 19 the Illinois Student Association is holding a caucus in Springfield. On this day Thompson and Speaker Michael Madigan will address the students present on higher education funding.

During this week a lot of higher education bills will be coming up and student presence will be very important. Eastern is sending a delegation up to Springfield and anyone interested in going should contact Student Body President Terry Teele.

Don't be embarrassed if you do not know your senator or state representative. The student government office can supply you with their names and addresses.

A letter does not take more than 10 minutes to write and a stamp only costs 20 cents. Aren't both of these things worth a $500 savings? It is time that the voice of the student is heard. This is the only way that we can win this battle. Education is expensive, but how much does ignorance cost?

Praise from Hawaii

Editor:

Way out here on the island of Oahu, surrounded by water, I have kept in touch with Eastern Illinois University and Charleston activities via a weekly shipment of The Daily Eastern News.

At the University of Hawaii (20,000 plus students) where I've basked as a visiting professor for the past year there is only a thrice-weekly student newspaper. You might say that I am prejudiced when I claim Eastern's student daily is far superior to Ka Leo o Hawaii, but it pleases me to report the UH journalism students and faculty with whom I have shared the News echo my sentiments.

My congratulations to Lola Burnham for capping an excellent four year career at Eastern with a superb editorship; a big bow, too, to all the staffers.

Congratulations to Steve Binder on his selection as 1983-84 editor and to all of the editorial staff. I have confidence they will continue the strong tradition of the News being an outstanding student newspaper.

I look forward to returning this summer except for the fact that President Daniel E. Marvin is leaving. His strong leadership and concern for the institution will be missed.

Search committee positions to be filled...

Six candidates will be running on a special ballot in the April 20 student government election.

Eastern students will vote for three candidates to serve on the campus advisory search committee to find Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin's successor.

Student Body President Terry Teele and the senate nominated candidates for the campus advisory search committee at Wednesday's senate meeting.

In selecting his nominees, Teele said he "tried to make it fair and represent as many areas of the student body as possible."

"I feel all three candidates are qualified to serve and are educated to the business of this university," Teele said.

Also, Jeffrey Lynch, Faculty Senate chairman, was selected to chair the campus advisory search committee.

Richard Goodrick, senate vice chairman, was chosen as senate election

The general election for the Faculty Senate is scheduled for April 28, with absentee balloting to be conducted April 27.

Board of Governors Executive Director Donald Walters has suggested, in accordance to his recommended time table, the campus advisory committee be established by May 2, with the first meeting to be completed by May 9.

Natalie Scott

Senior Natalie Scott said she is running as a candidate for the campus advisory search committee because she has a strong concern about the vital role Eastern's new president will play.

Scott, a business major from Streator, is a resident assistant at McKinney Hall. She has also been active in Eastern's student government, serving as Senate Speaker and executive vice president.

Scott said her involvement in student government and residence halls has helped her to become familiar with Eastern's administrators.

"I have worked closely with Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin and I am aware of what the job as a member of the campus committee entails," she said.

"Eastern's new president will be taking office at a difficult time, in light of the continual budget cuts," Scott said. "He will also have to face potential declining enrollments."

Strong leadership ability, a commitment to the position, knowledge of the job and the ability to listen to students' concerns are the qualifications Scott would look for in a president.

Madeleine Doubek

Madeleine Doubek said she believes the next president for Eastern must have extensive budgeting and finance experience, must possess an outspoken, assertive personality and must be accessible to campus organizations.

Doubek, a sophomore from Chicago, is majoring in journalism and is the news editor at the Daily Eastern News. Her background as former administration editor has given her insight into the duties of Eastern's president and knowledge of the higher education system in Illinois and Eastern, she said.

Doubek said she has learned about the problems she believes Eastern's next president will be facing by working at the newspaper.

"Keeping Eastern alive and afloat with its limited funding is easily the greatest hurdle our president would face," she said.

Doubek said finding a president with extensive budgetary experience, will fight for desperately-needed funding, is a vital step in securing Eastern's future.

"At a time when higher education funding is facing a record low, I want to do whatever might be in my power to help Eastern through this crucial period," she said.

Shernita Banks

Junior Shernita Banks said she believes her affiliation with various organizations makes her qualified to be a member of the campus advisory search committee.

Banks, a junior high education major from Harvey, is active in the Black Student Union, Unity Gospel Choir and the Judicial Board. She said she believes her involvement in campus groups has given her the will to be fair and open-minded.

Banks said the next president must be good with financing, public-relations and an overall concern for academics.

"The next president must try to make this campus a positive, conducive learning atmosphere," she said.

Qualities of a good leader and the capacity of achievement, responsibility, participation and status are other requirements Banks will be looking for in Eastern's next president.

"The next president must have an acceptable attitude that will benefit Eastern statewide and nationwide," she added.

Matt Glover

Junior Matt Glover said he was concerned about being included to find a presidential successor for Eastern because he has previously been involved with other search committees.

Glover is a political science major from Antioch who is currently the Board of Governors representative for Eastern. Glover has also participated on the Student Senate, Apportionment Board, Intercollegiate Athletic Board and the Publications Board.

"I feel I know how the university and the higher education system works because of my time serving as a student representative of the BOG," he said.

Glover said he feels the qualifications of a new president include the ability to work with students, faculty, staff and people associated with the university; an ability to work with the complex system of higher education; and a person committed to democracy in decision making.

The duties of Eastern's next president include administrator, decision maker, fiscal planner, occasional instructor and communicator, Glover said.

Glenn Good

Glenn Good said he could represent the students' interests as a member of the campus advisory search committee because of his previous experiences.

Good, a sophomore from Berwyn majoring in political science, is Senate Speaker. He has previously worked on student government, Thomas hall council, the housing committee and as a student representative at Charleston City Council meetings.

"One qualification that is important, is that I have developed good relations with the administrators," he said.

Good said he would like the next president to have a solid background in administration, a good relationship with administration, faculty and students and to be a believer in research that will benefit Eastern.

A duty of representing Eastern; maintaining relations between administration, faculty and staff; and the development of community relations with Charleston are some of the duties Good would require of the next president.

John Cole

Senior John Cole said he believes that his work with Eastern President Daniel E. Marvin makes him qualified to help find a man to fill the president's position.

Cole is a computer management and management major from Glen Ellyn. He is the financial vice president of the Student Senate and is campaigning for student body president.

"I know it will take a man who works well with the budget to be the next president," Cole said.

Cole said he believes it is vital that a president is found who will take the student voice into serious consideration. The president would have to be one that students could go to and he would always be receptive, he added.

Personableness, budgetary experience and leadership are the qualities Cole would look for in the next president.

"This president will be a very important man in this part of Illinois, if not the nation," Cole said. "He must be able to lead effectively to bring the university out of whatever problems may be encountered."

Coles said problems facing the next president will include the budgetary problem and the retention and acquisition of competent and qualified instructors.

Salukis pitching staff with a 0.53 earned run average, while senior Don Dapson, 3-1, sports a 0.34 ERA.

Eastern will counter with hurlers Kathy Richards and Donna Ridgway. Richards, 3-1, has a 1.30 ERA, while Ridgway, 2-1, boasts a 0.55 ERA.

Offensively, Eastern will look to senior Mary Tiegs and senior Nancy Massebaum, who both enter with a .367 batting averages.

Before facing the Salukis, Eastern will open the tourney against Southern Illinois-Edwardsville. Eastern's contest with Southern will mark the teams' second battle this week.

Eastern defeated the Cougars twice Tuesday by sweeping a double-header 2-1 and 6-0. The Panthers used some impressive pitching and 16 total hits to down the Cougars at Lantz Field.

The Cougars, 18-6, boast a strong pitching staff with senior Becki Saylor and sophomore Sandy Montgomery. Saylor, 8-3, carries an 0.68 ERA into Friday's game, while Montgomery, 7-3, enters the tournament with a 0.73 ERA.

In addition, Southern will rely on offensive help from junior Sherry Strandt, .397, and freshman Stacey Pritchard, second with a .338 average.

Panthers host SIU-E squad in four-game weekend set

by Mike Lynch

Probably at this stage of a season dominated by rainouts, the most important thing Eastern's baseball team could do is play a game.

The Panthers have lost more games to bad weather and field conditions than they have been able to play. Eastern sports a disappointing 8-7 record, following Tuesday's 9-3 loss to the University of Illinois.

In addition, Eastern is anticipating its home debut because rain and poor field conditions have forced the Panthers to cancel all their home contests.

The Panthers have been unsuccessful in four previous attempts to open their home campaign, but hope to host Southern Illinois University-Edwardsville in a pair of double-headers this weekend.

The opening twinbill is slated to start at 1 p.m. Saturday at Monier Field. A second double-header is scheduled to begin at 1 p.m. the following day.

"If it doesn't rain anymore our diamond should be ready," Eastern head coach Tom McDevitt said.

The Cougars, 12-6, have had problems with the weather and have lost 14 of their 32 scheduled games to rain.

Cougar head coach Garrett Collins said the main thing he's looking for when his team faces the Panthers is "a dry field."

"At this point I'm hoping to get at least one of the two double-headers in," Collins said.

McDevitt also said this weekend's games were important, "It's very important we get these games in this weekend," the Panther mentor said. "In fact, the next 19 games are important."

Should the Panthers and Cougars avoid their common nemesis—the weather—McDevitt has named right handers Mick Freed, 2-1, and Marshall Crutcher, 1-2, as the his starting pitchers.

Freed, a sophomore, heads Eastern's pitching staff with a 2.46 earned run average. In addition, Freed's ten strikeouts are second to staff leader Kevin Gordon's 12.

Freed will be making his first mound appearance since April 6 when he pitched brilliantly to earn a 7-5 decision over Illinois State University.

However, Crutcher was the pitcher of record in the 9-3 loss to the Illini on April 12. In that contest, the senior lasted seven innings to give up seven runs in ten hits.

Currently, Crutcher has a 5.49 ERA and leads the team in innings pitched with 21 1/3.

Southern will counter with a pair of right handers—Dave Gray, 2-0, and Scott Schaffer, 4-1, Collins said.

McDevitt did not name pitchers for Sunday's contest. However, Collins said he could name right hander Kent Taylor, 1-0, as one of his two starters.

Offensively, center fielder George Vogel, .350 at the plate, leads Southern Illinois. "Our hitting started slow but lately we've been hitting a bit," Collins said.

The Cougar mentor pointed to solid team defense and an improving pitching staff as his squad's strengths.

"We've played real well defensively and our pitching staff is really starting to come around," Collins said.

However, Eastern currently boasts five players with batting averages above .300 including right fielder Neal Bertram who is hitting .404.

The other Panther sluggers to post averages above .300 are third basemen Kevin Seitzer, .382, second basemen Steve Hall, .339, first basemen Jeff Yocum, .333, and center fielder Troy Harper, .333.

Injuries hurt tracksters

by Rhea Nall

Eastern's top distance runner Perry Edinger and sprinter Sam Graham will not compete Saturday at the Illinois State Invitational because of injuries.

Edinger will possibly be out for the rest of the season because of an Achilles heel tendon injury that is "not responding to treatment," Eastern head coach Neil Moore said Thursday.

Graham, recovering from a hamstring pull, is expected to return to the team soon.

Graham's injury will also force him to miss competing at the at the Association of Mid-Continent Universities championship meet April 22-23 in Macomb.

Moore said Saturday's six-team non-scoring invitational will help his coaching staff to find replacements for Edinger and Graham for meets they will miss this season.

"It's a little touchy because we have some people injured," Moore said. "We're looking to see if some of the younger guys have what it takes to step in and take up the slack."

In addition, Moore said Saturday's meet will act as an "evaluating tool" for next weekend's AMCU championships at Western Illinois University.

Softballers seek second GCAC victory

by Kathy Leahy

Looking to record its second conference win, Eastern's softball team will compete Friday and Saturday at the four-team Southern Illinois-Carbondale Tournament.

Eastern, 6-3, will face Gateway Collegiate Athletic Conference rival Southern Illinois University-Carbondale, 11-5, in the tournament's opening round at 3 p.m. Friday.

"This tournament is very important to us," Eastern head coach Deanna D'Abbraccio said. "With Carbondale being a conference team, we really need to beat them and they are tough."

The Panthers are scheduled to play Southern Illinois-Edwardsville 9 a.m. Friday. They will also meet Southeast Missouri State 9 a.m. Saturday.

The tournament championship round is slated for 1 p.m. Saturday with the third and fourth-best teams playing, while the two teams with the best first-round record will play at 3 p.m.

However, D'Abbraccio said Eastern's opening-round clash with Southern Illinois-Carbondale is foremost in her players' minds going into the tournament.

"Southern Illinois-Carbondale has a good team," D'Abbraccio said. "They will definitely be our biggest threat in this tournament."

The Salukis boast junior college transfer Toyna Lindsey and sophomore Kathy Richert who are the tournament batting .333 and .29, respectively.

Netters set for Principia quadrangular

by Scott Mountford

Eastern's men's tennis team enters Friday's important quadrangular match at Elsha riding one of its best seasons starts ever at 11-3.

The quadrangular will feature host Principia College, conference foe Southwest Missouri State, Bradley University and Eastern.

Panther head coach Carl Sexton said Eastern will face some of the best teams and he expects some "very good tennis" as a result.

"If I were to select four teams to play in a quadrangular, these would be the four," Sexton said. "All of the teams are challenging and equally threatening to one another."

Sexton said he also believes despite his team's good performance so far this year, no team will walk away without losing during the weekend.

"I doubt if anyone is going to sweep the weekend and go 3-0 because these kind of tournaments are very enduring," Sexton explained.

This will be the first time the Panthers have faced Principia and Sexton said he believes that the Indians may have the inside track on winning the tournament.

"Principia will put the best player in the tournament, Paul Braunan, on the court," Sexton said. "He has come close to going undefeated each year he has played."

"To beat them, we're going to have to win down the line," he added.

The Panthers defeated Bradley earlier this season in Lantz Fieldhouse 5-4, but lost during the indoor season at Bradley.

"Bradley will be looking to get back at us for the loss they suffered down here a few weeks ago," Sexton said.

Probably the most important match for the Panthers will be with Southwest Missouri because they are a member of the Association of Mid-Continent Universities conference.

"With the conference tournament right around the corner, we need to do well against the Bears," Sexton said. "If we do, it will be a good confidence builder and we would probably be able to receive a high seed for the tournament."

"It will be a good experience for the team to play at Principia, not only because they have such a good team but because they have such good facilities," Sexton said.

Student writes, directs, acts in 'macabre Christmas tale'

by Rick Bagley

While it isn't the season for a Christmas movie, curious students may be interested in viewing a new feature-length film to be shown in the Union this weekend.

Twenty-year-old Marc Tompulis is a writer, director, producer, and actor for the movie, "Red Christmas." He described the film simply as a "macabre Christmas tale."

Tompulis, a sophomore, said he first became interested in cameras and their operation when a seventh grade teacher had complications with a projector. "I was able to fix it and have been interested in cameras ever since."

Four years ago, Tompulis got together with three colleagues and formed KCT Productions with parental support.

What is truly amazing about Tompulis and his friends is that they have put together a movie without any professional help. Almost everything that Tompulis and his cohorts have learned about movie-making has been through experience.

The only classes Tompulis has had which have given him some valuable information were Film Communication and Cinema I and II with instructor Joe Heumann.

"Joe has pointed things out in class that I never knew anything about," Tompulis remarked.

KCT Productions features voluntary casts because the movies are non-profit. Tompulis said "Red Christmas" cast consists of people from around his home in Homewood Flossmoor.

Tompulis said he would prefer to stay behind the camera as a career and he plans to move to California to make those first few steps.

He is already hard at work writing his next feature-length film, an espionage film based on a true story tentatively titled "Penford."

"We try to make a movie every summer," Tompulis said. "This one we are going to try to sell to a cable company because the expenses are getting a bit high."

However the fairy tale turns out, it appears that Tompulis may well be on his way to writing the end to his own success story.

"Red Christmas" will be shown at 7 p.m. Friday and Saturday in the Union Arcola-Tuscola room and the Charleston-Mattoon room, respectively. Admission is free.

On the cover

This week's Verge cover illustrates that sometimes things just don't go as well as planned. Due to space limitations this week, the Verge staff chose to feature only the regular items. Today's originally scheduled stories have been postponed until next week so that they may be better presented. We look forward to seeing you next week.

THE FINAL CUT

Pink Floyd

Pink Floyd's last album, 1979's The Wall, was a multi-platinum hit, spawning the single "Another Brick in the Wall Part 2" and The Wall movie.

While The Wall focused on the disintegration of one man's life, The Final Cut deals with what Waters sees as inevitable nuclear holocaust. Certainly a more far-reaching and important topic.

This album features a new stereo process called "Holophonics." What this means is that you can hear several distinct things going on in each channel clearly.

One of the keys to The Wall was the death of the main character's father in World War II. In real life, Waters' father died in that "war to end all wars," and that is the starting point for The Final Cut.

The album opens with "The Post War Dream." Here Waters looks at the modern world and asks, "Is this for this that Daddy died?" He's left to cry out to the British prime minister, "Maggie, what have we done?"

"Your Possible Pasts" has to do with soldiers being packed off to war by coldhearted leaders. With a warning snare shot, the song launches into its plain refrain—"Do you remember me? How we used to be? Do you think we should be closer?"

The word "closer" echoes off into infinity, to be replaced by a ticking. At first evocative of 1973's album The Dark Side of the Moon's "Time," it soon becomes apparent that here it is both the seconds of the world figuratively ticking away, and literally the timer on the narrator's atomic bomb.

"The Hero's Return" features a lurching beat, climaxing in a crescendo that cuts off just as neatly as "A Day in the Life"'s. It becomes apparent that the narrator was a British soldier in the Falkland Islands war. He remembers the dying words of a fellow soldier, which comprise "The Gunner's Dream."

The gunner in question speaks of an idealistic world where "Maniacs don't blow holes in bandmen by remote control." At one point, Waters' voice shifts from being a man in mid-scream to a saxophone.

"Paranoid Eyes" involves the everyday avoidance of thinking of important issues, done by going to a bar and "laughing too loud at the rest of the world." Disillusionment with the modern world returns, however: "The pie in the sky turned out to be miles too high."

With the groundwork laid on side one, side two finds Waters' icy "cut" going even deeper. It begins with a concise summing up of Thatcher's response to the Falklands affair, "Get Your Filthy Hands Off My Desert."

This glides into "The Fletcher Memorial Home," where world leaders past and present view themselves on TV, "to make sure they're still real." Waters calls the roll, which includes Reagan, Haig, McCarthy, and Nixon, concluding "Did they expect us to treat them with any respect?" There may be no more chilling a line than the concluding "Now the final solution can be applied."

"The Final Cut" finds the narrator becoming ever more frightened and confused. With the bomb ticking away in the background, he confesses that he had contemplated suicide, but "I never had the nerve to make the final cut."

This leads into "Not Now John," where the narrator finally goes berserk, screaming about war, "There's too many home fires burning and not enough trees." The song revels in its Holophonics, and there seems to be a hundred things going on at once. A group of female singers lend a cheesy backup, giving the song just the right feel.

However, the world is too occupied to bother with this problem: "F all that, we've got to get on with these," it responds, "these" referring to everything from competition with the "wily Japanese" to making a movie (Waters sums up the Hollywood philosophy succinctly: "Who cares what it's about as long as the kids go").

The narrator knows he's got everyone in his palm, but for some reason things just aren't working out. The best anyone can say is "Come at the end of the shift, we'll go and get pissed."

The last verse, however, is the focal point of the entire album. It drips with sarcasm. "No need to worry about the Vietnamese" he chuckles, being echoed by a mad laugh in one channel. "Got to bring the Russian bear to his knees!" he declares, immediately correcting himself with, "Well, maybe not the Russian bear—maybe the Swedes." He sneeringly continues, accompanied by roaring jet planes: "We showed Argentina, now let's go and show these."

Then, in three different languages (apparently meant to be those countries), people look unsuccessfully for a bar to lose themselves in. Finally, the earlier voice who wanted to "get pissed" is left screaming desperately, "Where's the fing bar John!" Well, there ain't no bars left, and not much else either.

After this tumult, The Final Cut ends with "Two Suns in the Sunset"—the second one being, of course, a mushroom cloud. "Could be the human race is run," Waters muses, and the album concludes with a verse that is both peaceful and devastating:

*And as the windshield melts
My tears evaporate
Leaving only charcoal to defend
Ashes and diamonds
Foe and friend
We were all equal in the end.*

The Final Cut may be the last album that Pink Floyd puts out. Waters will still record, however, and with the exception of Gilmour's playing, little will probably be lost. It would seem to be impossible to surpass this album—but then, that's what I thought about The Wall.

Seymour Hersh is probably the most important investigative reporter in America today. Winner of the Pulitzer Prize for uncovering the My Lai massacre in Viet Nam, former investigative "ace" of the NEW YORK TIMES, Hersh created national controversies with his reports on the CIA's domestic spying operations, Richard Nixon's secret bombing of Cambodia, and the illegal sale of U.S. weapons to mid-east terrorists.

Rules of the road (trip)

I'm going mobile—The Who

With the coming of spring, the phrase "road trip" is often heard across the campuses of this great nation.

A road trip can consist of a 50-mile detour into the heart of madness during a late-night munchie run. Or it can result from a early morning phone call from a close friend downstate.

"Sure, come on down. I don't have any other plans."

The main appeal of a road trip is its spontaneity. There's not much planning except for your destination (a friend's house or apartment) and your determination to have a good time in another town or city for a night or weekend.

However, road trips can lead to disaster unless certain steps are followed before and during the journey. Here are some tips for conducting a successful road trip.

•Never start on a road trip until you know exactly where you're going. You'd be surprised how many people neglect this step. These vacillating types drive all over the back roads and eventually end up filling small town jails on vagrancy charges. Be decisive and know where you want to go before hitting the road.

•Always get your directions to your host's home or apartment from friendly sources. Never take them over the phone from your friend's roommate. That roommate still remembers when you drop kicked his cat out the window. The roommate would prefer you get lost in the boondocks.

•Your vehicle should be reliable for long distance travel. Make sure you have plenty of oil, water and gas. Your means of transportation should be equipped with a music system or a static-free radio to relieve the boredom. The car should be spacious and comfortable for all passengers.

The key to a good road trip is spontaneity. Obviously, these potential road trippers are packing too much luggage. Notice the beer and golf clubs (potential weapons) have not been packed first. (News file photo)

Reasonable trunk room is needed for beer, munchies and sleeping gear.

•Pack necessary items. Clothing, toiletries, blanket and pillow are all necessary. Never take pets. They tend to disappear on road trips. If reptilian, their disappearance will cause considerable anxiety for your host.

•Always prepare for violence in strange lands by packing weapons. A tire iron or baseball bat can function very well in a mob scene. If a peace officer finds these articles during an arbitrary search then pass them off as essential items. ("But officer, sir, we use the bat to crack walnuts.")

•Controlled substances are optional. Just remember that some road trips may run through "foreign countries" such as the outlying counties of Wisconsin or Indiana. The peace officers there are endowed with full gestapo powers and do not take kindly to hippie types from college. Store your controlled substances carefully about your vehicle because body searches can result from the slightest transgression in these regions.

•Two people should be designated driver and navigator for each road trip. The driver must have a keen eye and steady hand to weather the long trip. The navigator position is honorary (Someone has to sit on the passenger's side, right?) A good navigator serves his duty best by avoiding beer spills on the driver or not throwing up on the dashboard. Due to this arrangement, it would be advisable to have the directions written down and displayed for the driver's convenience.

•The driver should not drink during the journey. However, the navigator should be drunk all the way so you won't try the driver's nerves by complaining about the latter's driving habits.

•Remember you're escaping from reality and responsibility for a while. If one of your passengers mentions that exam coming up on Monday don't hesitate to throw the nonbeliever out the window. Such heretical thinking cannot be tolerated on a road trip. Soon you'll be worrying about school work also. If you abhor violence then pitch out their textbooks instead.

•Always arrange for bail money before leaving. Carry a list of phone numbers of potential financial sources at all times. Be sure to know their roommates' names as well or they'll probably hang up after you start screaming for money.

•When do you go home? Physical evidence will abound. Your eyes will be a bright red. Sudden movement will be risky and cause considerable pain above the neck. You will probably find yourself watching a "Lone Ranger" rerun on Sunday morning.

Your host will be uneasy about your presence. Certain hints will be dropped. Your personal items will be thrown outside. If this doesn't work your host asks, "When the hell ya leavin', anyway?" For the sake of friendship take the hints.

•While you're driving back be sure to recount all experiences with fellow road trippers. This will come in handy if there are any criminal charges stemming from the weekend's activities. As they say—always get your stories straight.
